

Elizabeth Ritt is Dean and Professor of North Park University's School of Adult Learning, where she has served for five years. Prior to joining the School of Adult Learning, she was Executive Director of the Center for Professional Education and Outreach Initiatives at Lewis University. She has published many papers on the fields of education and health care, including Asking Life's Biggest Questions: Dialogue and the Paradox of Institutional Distinctiveness, which she co-authored, for the Higher Learning Commission. She holds an Ed.D, specializing in Leadership and Educational Policy Studies, from Northern Illinois University (1989). She received her Master of Science in Nursing (MSN), specializing in Adult Health Nursing/Education, from Loyola University (1982).